Playing shows abroad, to being stuck with a 9 - 5.

Follow the Ashley Alexander guide to getting off the bleachers as he sticks it to the man with his debut single "Best Song".

For release on the week of April 5th

From the dance floor of Rhythm and vines to performing and recording in the rocky mountains of Colorado USA, the Paraparaumu raised Gemini touches down following a 4-year hiatus armed to the teeth with soulfunk motifs with his debut single "Best song".

After a season of moonlit mornings spent studio-bound, the multi-instrumentalist showcases an Anderson Paak inspired vocal confronting the 9-5 grind head-on, recalling moments hung up on the sideline instead of chasing one's dreams.

"I went from being young and hungry, playing shows nationally and abroad, too being slumped and depressed working a minimum wage 9-5 job. At the time, I had two childhood friends pass away in quick succession from horrible circumstances. I think it can be hard to get people to believe in you when you're unable to believe in yourself. Best Song was simply the better half of my Gemini brain standing up for my weaker side, sticking it to the man and putting myself first".

"Best song" will be released April 5th as part of his debut project "Staring at the sun for too long" dropping later this year. With tour dates and more releases to come, Ashley is set for the busiest orbit around the sun yet.
